The hottest place in the world is El Azizia in the Sahara desert in Africa. Sometimes the temperature is 66°C. But there are many other places that also get very hot and there are deserts in other parts of Africa, Asia, America and Australia. But deserts are not always hot. At night, deserts are very cold.

Not many animals and plants live in a desert, because it doesn't rain very often, so there is no water. One animal likes the desert – the camel. It has got big feet to walk on the sand. It can live for a long time without water. Sometimes it doesn't drink for weeks. When it finds water it can drink 50 litres.
